"It is often argued that performance is affected when on a ketogenic diet, but that is not entirely true. Even if you are engaging in long bouts of cardio, this diet has been proved over and over again to be effective. The only time that ketosis can reduce performance is when doing exercises that require an explosive action. If you need to boost your performance during these activities, you can increase your carb intake by taking about twenty five to fifty grams of carbohydrates half an hour before training."
